MHE NEWS AND POLICY WORK

MHE policy work on social inclusion and mental health: MHE and the European Federation of National Organisations Working with the Homeless call on Members of European Parliament to enhance policies on homelessness and mental health

Mental Health Europe (MHE), together with the European Federation of National Organisations Working with the Homeless (FEANTSA) prepared a joint policy statement putting forward key recommendations for the newly elected Members of European Parliament to address the issues of homelessness and mental health.

Evidence shows that there is clear link between mental health problems and homelessness. There is a consensus at EU level that homelessness needs to be tackled, as acknowledged by the European Parliament in a written declaration on homelessness in 2008, but more concrete action is required. The European Parliament also adopted earlier this year a Resolution on Mental Health, clearly supporting the importance of EU-wide cooperation on this issue, as promoted in the European Pact for Mental Health and Well-being.

In their joint statement, MHE and FEANTSA point out that an effective implementation of the European Pact for Mental Health and Well-being has to be ensured. The respect and safeguarding of human rights and the promotion of mental health and well-being for all should become key priorities in all policies. Everyone has a right to housing, to the highest attainable standard of physical and mental health, and to quality healthcare and social services. Targeted policy measures aimed at fighting extreme poverty, social exclusion and homelessness are needed, as they have an unquestionable impact on people's state of health, including mental health. Cooperation amongst policy-makers working in different policy areas such as social policy, housing, public health, physical health and mental health in the sense of a holistic approach are needed.

The common MHE-FEANTSA statement can be downloaded at: <http://www.mhe-sme.org/assets/files/Common%20statement%20FEANTSA%20MHE%20.pdf>

MHE policy work on social inclusion and mental health: NGO meeting with Robert Verrue, new Director General of DG Employment, Social Affairs & Equal Opportunities

During a meeting organised by the Social Platform, European Social NGO's were given the opportunity for dialogue with Robert Verrue, the new Director General of DG Employment. MHE representative Astrid Mechel delivered a brief introduction on the work on MHE and highlighted the consequences of the unfortunate cuts in public spending for mental health and social services in times of financial and economic crisis, and the subsequent additional effects on the mental health of the population. Delegates were reminded of the commitment made at EU level such as in the European Pact for Mental Health and Wellbeing.

MHE policy work on social inclusion and mental health: Participation in Social Platform networking visit with the upcoming Spanish EU Presidency

On 7 and 8 September 2009, Mental Health Europe and some of its members participated in a networking visit with the upcoming Spanish Presidency in Madrid, organised by the Social Platform. The aim of the event was to connect social NGOs with the upcoming Spanish EU Presidency.

During the event, an exchange between more than 60 NGO's and the Directorate General for Social Policies, Families and Youth from the Spanish Ministry of Public Health and Social Policies, Juan Carlos Mato, took place. Fundación INTRAS and MHE prepared a statement about key issues at stake in Spain regarding mental health policies and how the recession affects the mental health sector in Spain. Key recommendations addressed to national and European policy-makers were also presented. The MHE delegation pointed out that mental health can be seen as an indicator of the current crisis and of its gravity. Redundancies and the closing of institutions represent a worrying aspect: depression increased within the population, affecting not only people made redundant in the crisis, but whole families. Current developments include the loss of social bonds and an increased number of suicides. Mental health is to be seen as a sensitive aspect of social policy. In the sense of a Social Pact, the exit out of the crisis needs to be managed in a coordinated way, encompassing social protection, employment and training. Further follow-up with the Spanish Presidency is being continued.

The common statement of Fundación INTRAS and MHE can be downloaded here:

2nd European Conference on Schizophrenia Research, 21-23 September, Berlin

MHE was very pleased to be invited to contribute to one of the symposia organized in the framework of this well attended conference, held by the Competence Network on Schizophrenia, the German Psychiatry and Psychotherapy Association and the European Psychiatric Association.

Mary Van Dievel, presented MHE "Good practices for combating social exclusion of people with mental health problems" project on the Symposium "From stigma research to mental health policy". Other speakers were Janet Wallcraft representing the European Network of (ex-)Users and Survivors of Psychiatry (ENUSP), who highlighted the user involvement in mental health research; Claire Henderson, who spoke about the "Time to change - Anti-stigma programme in England", and Harald Zäske who highlighted the activities of the German Alliance for Mental Health. Other interesting symposia for MHE areas of work were "Working together: vocational recovery in early psychosis" and "Addressing stigma - A quality feature for best psychiatric care".

Abstract of all the presentations can be downloaded form the Conference website at <http://www.schizophrenianet.eu/home.html>

Mental Health and the Issues Facing Society: Rehabilitation, Social Involvement and Professional Integration, 29 September, Luxembourg

More than 250 people attended the Conference "Mental Health and the Issues Facing Society: Rehabilitation, Social Involvement and Professional Integration" held in Mersch (Luxembourg) and organised by the Association d'Aide par le Travail Thérapeutique pour Personnes Psycotiques (ATP).

MHE was invited to speak about the European context. Mary Van Dievel presented MHE and its activities, gave an overview of the European Institutions and their respective roles and talked about the EU Pact on Mental health and Well-Being and MHE activities in the field of social inclusion (Pogress Programme).

Other speakers came from France, Québec, Ireland, Switzerland, USA, UK and Luxembourg. Mental health service users gave evidence about their re-employment process, be it in supported or regular employment schemes. Some of the speakers from abroad encouraged the staff from sheltered employment / sheltered workshop to social firms / social employment.

NEWS FROM MHE MEMBER ORGANISATIONS

Mental Health Services need to transform their workforce to implement recovery

A paper recently published by Sainsbury Centre for Mental Health states that mental health trusts should actively recruit people with personal experience of using services. "Implementing Recovery", by Dr Jed Boardman and Prof Geoff Shepherd, sets out the ten major challenges for mental health services to put recovery at the heart of their everyday practice.

To read more about the paper, please see

Prisoners with mental health problems should not be excluded from help to find work, says Sainsbury Centre

Prisoners with mental health problems are not getting the support they need to gain employment when they are released, according to a policy paper published at the beginning of September by Sainsbury Centre for Mental Health, MHE member. The report states that many prison-based work preparation schemes exclude prisoners with mental health problems because they are not thought to be ready for work. Most employment schemes for offenders place too much emphasis on learning skills and not enough on what actually helps people to get and keep jobs. Ineffective employment support inside and outside prison is leaving many thousands of people out of the labour market and at high risk of offending again. This report states that many of the most successful schemes feature the core principles of Individual Placement and Support, the most effective approach to assisting people with mental health problems to get into work. They include direct links with local employers, support 'through the gate' that is sustained once a person gets a job, and help not just with employment but also health, housing and other needs. Offenders with mental health problems should be given an equal chance to participate in employment schemes, and get help for their health at the same time. The report from Sainsbury Centre calls on the British Government to shift the emphasis of its employment programmes for offenders from training and job preparation to helping people into paid employment.

Campaign 1 in 4

GGZ Nederland, the Dutch Organisation for Mental Health, representing the mental health services and addiction care in the Netherlands, started a campaign called "www.1opde4.nl" in order to show that mental health problems occur very often and that they can be treated well.

"Nothing to be ashamed of!": With big posters on "Prince Day" in two popular newspapers GGZ Nederland draws the attention to the work done in the mental health services and addiction care.

Shame: One in four adults in the Netherlands has mental health problems. Despite these problems occur on large scale, prejudice and shame are still present. On the website www.1opde4.nl films of users and carers of the mental health and addiction can be viewed.

An interesting sector: The campaign is mainly directed towards people between 20<40 years. The early age of the audience is the rational for choosing an online campaign. GGZ Nederland wants to stress that mental health care doesn't only represent a high cost for the society, but also "an investment in the mental resilience of the country".

European Parliament adopted a motion on Lithuanian law on the Protection of Minors against the Detrimental Effects of Public Information

The European Parliament, meeting in plenary session in Strasbourg on 17th of September, discussed and adopted a motion for resolution on the situation in Lithuania regarding the recently adopted homophobic legislation. MEPs say the wording of the law is "vague and legally unclear and might lead to controversial interpretations". It is unclear what kind of materials are concerned and whether the law extends to books, art, press, publicity, music, theatre, exhibitions or demonstrations. While acknowledging the need for "appropriate legal protection" of children, Parliament stresses the importance of fighting discrimination "in particular when it is based on sexual orientations." Parliament welcomes more recent steps to review the changes and asks Lithuania to ensure that their laws are compatible with international and European human and civil rights legislation. MEPs call the Agency for Fundamental Rights to give an opinion and for Parliament's Civil Liberties Committee to follow up the issue. The Parliament adopted its resolution by 349 votes in favour to 218 against with 46 abstentions.

MHE welcomes the motion and will follow up on the outcomes of this vote.

Swedish Ministers presented Presidency Priorities in the European Parliament's Employment and Social Affairs Committee

On 2-3 September, Swedish Minister for Elderly Care and Public Health Maria Larson, Swedish Minister for Employment Sven Otto Littorin as well as Bettina Kashefi, State Secretary responsible for sickness insurance, pensions and social insurance administration at the Swedish Ministry for Social Security, presented the EU Presidency priorities in their respective areas, followed by a question-and-answer session with the members of the European Parliament's Employment and Social Affairs Committee.

The presentations highlighted the Swedish Presidency's goals towards promoting society wellbeing, healthy and dignified ageing, disabled people. They also stressed the importance of improving the quality of care towards a more individual, tailor-made approach according to the individual's personal needs, labour market inclusion and the fight against poverty. The Swedish Ministers also called for an improved cooperation between health care and social protection sector as well as an enhanced exchange of best practices of the EU member states.

Mental Health Europe had presented its view on the Swedish Presidency Priorities to the Swedish Presidency in July 2009.

Ah Hoc Group on the Transition from Institutional Care to Community-Based care

On 23 September, the members of the Expert group were invited to hand over the final report to Commissioner Špidla. He was very pleased with the outcomes since they cover the major group of people who spend long years on institutional care: people with physical or intellectual disabilities, mental health problems, elderly and children. The actual number of people in institutional care is difficult to ascertain, but it is certainly in the millions.

The report identifies several key challenges on deinstitutionalisation and a set of common basic principles. It also indicates the Member States as main actors in the achievement of high quality standards in this field. The meeting gave members the opportunity to address Recommendations to the European Commission: namely to present a Communication on the transition to community-based care and to build common basic principles into all relevant EU policies.

A follow-up meeting with all the experts will be organised.

The report is now available in English, but will be soon published in all EU languages.

Barroso's concessions on Social issues

The European Parliament approved the appointment of José Manuel Barroso as President of the European Commission for a second term on 16 September 2009. President Barroso made concessions on social issues which are collected in his position document "Political guidelines for the next Commission". President Barroso's political guidelines include proposals to engage a social impact assessment for new legislation; a women's charter to address the gender pay gap; a framework for quality public services.

Barroso: Next EU Commission to have a Commissioner for Human Rights and Civil Liberties

José Manuel Barroso stated that the next European Commission is likely to have a new Commissioner responsible for Human Rights and Civil Liberties. The promise about the new portfolio has been made by Barroso in a meeting with the Liberal Democrats' MEPs during which Barroso tried to convince about his re-election as President of the upcoming Commission. Currently the European Commission has a Justice, Freedom and Security Commissioner, but critics have long argued that it is too broad to give enough attention to data protection issues as well as the pressing problem of immigration and the rights of migrants in member states.

Online debate on EU health and consumer policy

The Directorate General for Health and Consumers (DG SANCO) celebrated its 10th anniversary this autumn. On this occasion an online discussion on EU health and consumer policy was launched. EU health and consumer policy touches many aspects of the daily life of Europeans, from the safety of the food they eat or the products they use, to the protection they enjoy when making purchases. The on-line debate was launched on September 14 providing Europeans with a good opportunity to make their voices heard on health and consumer policy and to get involved in a discussion with others. While visiting a special sub-site it is also possible to vote in an on-line opinion poll and learn more about EU initiatives by watching video-clips or links provided. The specific channel on Debate Europe (<http://europa.eu/debateeurope>) will be open until 9 October 2009. The conclusions of the online discussion will be presented during an anniversary seminar on 23 October 2009 which will be attended by current and former Commissioners, stakeholders and the media. It will also be made available on the DG SANCO website.

Fundamental Rights Agency undertakes a study on how to link human rights education to its key target groups

The European Agency on Fundamental Rights (FRA) has commissioned the Change Institute (CI) with Professor Audrey Osler, founding Director of the Centre for Citizenship and Human Rights Education (CCHRE) at the University of Leeds, to undertake a preparatory study investigating how human rights education can best be linked to key FRA target groups. This study will assist in identifying areas where the FRA may bring added value to existing work and enable it respond to identified needs. The aim of the study is to ensure that not only the needs of the stakeholders and targeted groups are identified, but appropriate materials related to education and training are developed to ensure sustainability and long term effectiveness, as well as complimentary with existing initiatives. The preparatory study includes a mapping of existing human rights education initiatives throughout Europe, an institutional needs assessment for advancing human rights education across the EU including at European and Member State level as well as a targeted consultation with relevant stakeholders. MHE has been asked to contribute as relevant stakeholder. The consultation took place on 15 September and included some elements on what Mental Health Europe considers as priority for actions to be undertaken by the FRA in the field of human rights education.

For more information about MHE key activities in human rights field, please contact Roselyne Bourgon, MHE Human Rights Officer at Roselyne.bourgon@mhe-sme.org

EU Parliament president accepts disability rights demands

During the week of 14-17 September, 440 people from 21 European countries met in Strasbourg for the Freedom Drive. The group included disabled people with their personal assistants. The common cause being Independent Living: deinstitutionalization, the right of personal assistance and the ratification of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disability. One of the 8 demands of Freedom Drivers handed over to EU Parliament President Jerzy Burzek and to Richard Howitt MEP on 16 September was to the European Community to ratify the human rights convention.

Freedom Drivers furthermore asked for a continuation of the development of community-based services to achieve deinstitutionalization across Europe.

REMINDER: Calls for Proposals for the European Year 2010 for Combating Poverty and Social Exclusion are being published

In Europe, 78 million people live below the poverty line; this equates to 16% of the European population, hence the Year 2010 will be the European Year for Combating Poverty and Social Exclusion. In this framework, issues such as eradicating child poverty, access to good housing, unemployment, and fighting discrimination will be addressed. The EY 2010 has a budget of 26 million Euros of which 17 million Euros are provided by the EU. Civil society organizations are invited to contribute to activities via calls for proposals that will be issued by the National Implementing Bodies in each EU country. Among the numerous funded activities, there will be awareness-raising campaigns, solidarity campaigns, conferences and other pioneering initiatives. Up to date, calls for proposals have been published in Austria, Belgium, France, Luxembourg and the UK.

To know more about the European Year 2010 for Combating Poverty and Social Exclusion, please see the webpage <http://ec.europa.eu/social/main.jsp?langId=en&catId=637>

IV. PUBLICATIONS

Thomas Hammarberg, High Commissioner for Human Rights, viewpoint's publication

The High Commissioner for Human Rights at the Council of Europe, Thomas Hammarberg, published a viewpoint on the question of legal capacity and full enjoyment of human rights for persons with mental disabilities. Underlining the importance of a full compliance with the provisions of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, the Commissioner calls for policies to ensure that the full legal capacity is combined with the right of the individual to seek support. At the same time, he recommends that the exercise of this support be always regulated with safeguards to avoid the trust to be misused. MHE contributed to the work of the Commissioner on this issue among other stakeholders. MHE welcomes warmly High Commissioner's initiative to focus on the issue of legal capacity which is a key challenge in the implementation of the United Nations Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

United Nations High Commissioner on Human Rights revises its Handbook for Parliamentarians on the UN Convention "From Exclusion to Equality"

The Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights revised its Handbook for Parliamentarians on the UN Convention and its Optional Protocol "From Exclusion to Equality, realizing the rights of persons with disabilities". The updates mainly give further clarification on supported decision-making and freedom from unwanted medical interventions.

This Handbook aims to assist parliamentarians and other politicians in efforts to realize the Convention so that persons with disabilities can achieve the transition from exclusion to equality. The Handbook seeks to raise awareness of the Convention and its provisions, promote an appreciation of disability concerns, and assist parliaments in understanding the mechanisms and frameworks needed to translate the Convention into practice.

The European Coalition for Community Living published a Report on Article 19 of the UN Convention

The European Coalition for Community Living (ECCL) published its report "Focus Report on Article 19 of the UN Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities", which sets out the key steps for implementing the right to live in the community. It provides detailed commentary on Article 19, including its huge potential to bring about change to the lives of people with disabilities in Europe and possible challenges in achieving such change. The Report suggests specific actions that national, regional and local governments, the European Community and the Council of Europe should take to give effect to this right. It aims to assist individuals and organisations involved in promoting, implementing and monitoring the CRPD, such as policy makers, organisations of people with disabilities and service providers.

The report is available on ECCL website at www.community-living.info or by writing to coordinator@community-living.info.
